1. Welcome and Check In

Meeting began at 8:21 a.m. Jennifer asked student representatives Kayla and Nancy how things were going at this stage of the semester. They both replied all is fine.

2. Scale of Adoption Self-Assessment Revise for CAGP 6 and the State Chancellors' Office

Jennifer thanked the team for their past, present, and future work. The focus will now be to incorporate equity. Florida reported that she is in the middle of writing the equity grant that ties in with pathways, so it will all mesh. She plans to have a Hobson's Starfish training in the summer plus a video shown during institute day. Jennifer reported the fall work put on hold due to the wildfires and faculty labor negotiations will bump up, along with spring work, to spring and summer. Rob Johnstone and some of the people from CCRC will make a technical visit to educate the district on what it means to them and the types of decisions the college can make versus the district. MJC cannot wait for Columbia, as they are two years behind in implementing pathways, but can share core commonalities. Tina suggested having information technology present at the meeting as well. Curtis mentioned he would like MJC's focus to be on both the quality of education and equity.

The group began working on the homework. The initial version is due April 30 and the NOVA entry by September 30. Jennifer would like to adhere to the timeline, to which the team agreed. This will allow time for senate and president approval prior to its final due date. A discussion ensued on the need for clarification of the flexible fifteens, promoting the pathways design to MJC's wide audience, assessing PLOs, and possibly having a summit with area high school counselors and the Modesto City Schools superintendent.

Patrick reviewed how Ad Astra interfaces with Hobsons Starfish. The goal will be to have student Comprehensive Educational Plans (CEPs) be the basis for scheduling classes. From a student's perspective, Kayla believes it will prove helpful to know what classes are available at a particular time of day instead of having to go through all of them one by one. Patrick requested pilot program maps for Ad Astra to begin with, which they do not need to receive at once. Rob will forward a few for him to pass on.

As time was running short, the group reviewed a few of the more pertinent questions. The steering committee will schedule a meeting to continue the work and email the results to the remaining members for review and input.
